

LGBT activist Oscar Cazorla killed in his home in Oaxaca, Mexico

Sofia Lotto Persio, PinkNews

13th February 2019, 12:51 PM

PinkNews Daily LGBT+ Newsletter

Signup to receive a daily roundup of the top LGBT+ news stories from around the world

Pioneering LGBT activist Oscar Cazorla was killed in his home in Juchitan, in Oaxaca, Mexico, on Saturday (February 9).

According to the Oaxaca police, who have opened a murder investigation, the 68-year-old died from a blow to the heart inflicted by a sharp object.

LGBT activist Oscar Cazorla was killed in his home on February 9. (Tradiciones Istmeñas, Minatitlan, Ver./Facebook)

Cazorla was well known in Mexico's southern state of Oaxaca for advocating for the rights of those identifying as muxes, a third, non-binary gender that has been celebrated in the culture indigenous to the Istmo de Tehuantepec since pre-Hispanic times.

In 1976, the slain LGBT+ activist was one of the founders of the Vela de las Autenticas Intrepidas Buscadores del Peligro—which roughly translates as the Vigil of the Authentic, Fearless, Danger Seekers—an annual celebration that promotes the respect of muxes in Juchitan—a town of 75,000 that is home to an estimated 5,000 muxes, as AFP reported in 2017.

Cazorla's killing shocked the local community, who are mourning the activist. "The Authentic, Fearless, Danger Seekers are in mourning. You left us with the broken heart. Rest in peace. My brother Oscar Cazorla Lopez," wrote the group's president Felina Santiago Valdivieso, on Facebook.

LGBT activist Oscar Cazorla founded a festival celebrating the muxe community in 1976. (Miho Hagino/Facebook)

Speaking to CNN Espanol, Santiago Valdivieso called for a thorough investigation into Cazorla's murder, as no one has been arrested in connection with the death.

“He was a very happy person who welcomed anyone in his home with a smile. We cannot imagine who may have killed him,” they told the broadcaster.

Santiago Valdivieso also denounced an increase in homophobic and transphobic violence in the past four years against their community. “We are involved in a wave of violence affecting large parts of Mexico,” they said.

International institutions condemn the murder of LGBT+ activist Oscar Cazorla

International institutions also condemned Cazorla’s murder. Jan Jarab, the UN Human Rights Office’s representative in Mexico, said in a statement: “We condemn this terrible crime that affects the entire Muxe community and all human rights defenders in Oaxaca.”

Jarab continued: “In recent years, hate crimes and killings of LGBT+ rights defenders have occurred in different parts of the country without being adequately investigated. This pattern of impunity must be overcome and, for that, Oscar’s murder must be clarified, through a diligent investigation that considers all possible hypotheses, including the possibility of a hate crime or retaliation for his human rights defence activities.”

A statement from the European Union, Norway and Switzerland condemned both Cazorla's death and that of journalist Jesús Eugenio Ramos Rodríguez, who was shot dead in the state of Tabasco on the same day as the LGBT+ activist's murder.

The statement, issued on Tuesday (February 12), read: "We express our condolences and our deep solidarity with the family and friends of the victims. The deaths of Ramos and Cazorla demonstrate once again the worrisome degree of violence and intimidation faced by many journalists and defenders in Mexico."

Watch PinkNews

Video Smart Player invented by Digiteka

If You're Over 30 And Own A Computer, Thi...

Vikings: Free Online Game | Sponsored

The Most Beautiful Royal Women

Hooch | Sponsored

Surrogate Mom Who Gave Birth to 'Twins' Learns One Is Her

PostFun | Sponsored

The Must-Play Strategy Game of the Year

Grepolis - Free Online Game | Sponsored

17 things Jesus Christ said about homosexuality

Pink News

10 celebs on list of 'smallest penises in Hollywood'

Pink News

Read This: The Celebrities That You Didn't Realise Are Gay

This Photo Has Not Been Edited, Look Clos...

Trendchaser | Sponsored